Hussein plans no role in autonomy meetings

PARIS, Sept. 10 (Agencies) — King Hussein of Jordan said Monday he did not plan to join Egypt and Israel in negotiations for the autonomy of the Palestinian people and a settlement of the Middle East conflict.

The king declined to say whether he and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) favored the creation of an Arab confederation composed of Jordan and the West Bank or whether he would discuss such a project with President Carter in Washington at the end of this month.

"If anything happens, you'll hear about it first," he told reporters.

King Hussein, who had luncheon talks with French President Valery Giscard d Estaing, said on leaving the Elysee Palace that the Palestinian problem should be dealt with in the United Nations with the participation of all the parties involved.

"I have no intention of joining Egypt and Israel in negotiations for the autonomy of the Palestinian people," he said.

"First of all the problem does not concern us only. It concerns mainly the Palestinian people, the people whose rights have been King Hussein said the Palestinian people should decide their own future in total freedom "not in anything that is worked out either by the United States or by Israel and Egypt."

"We have been out of the picture and we will not be involved in anything that is not going to lead us anywhere," he said.

The king said it was now too late to hold a Geneva-type conference. "But maybe at some stage or another, a return to the United Nations may be the right course to take," he

Christophensen concludes visit

By Farouk Lugman

JEDDAH, Sept. 10 - Danish Foreign Vinister Henning Christophensen has held extensive talks with Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Resources Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani on country-to-country oil sales, but there is no such deal between Denmark and Saudi Arabia in the offing.

At a press conference here Monday marking the end of his visit to Saudi Arabía, he said the talks with Yamani were held "in view of the tendency by the oil-producing states to sell their own products directly. "It has become increasingly important to us to know how this new policy will develop. We do not want the few big oil companies to dominate the world oil market," he said.

Denmark imports 85 per cent of its oil requirements, and there had been speculation prior to Christophensen's visit that Denmark would like to sign a direct oil sales agreement with the Kingdom.

But in his remarks to reporters he said none had been signed, and concentrated instead on Denmark's massive program for ... development of alternative sources of energy, such as nuclear power, solar energy, and oil and gas exploration in the North Sea. Saudi Arabia supplies 10 per cent of Denmark's current oil requirements, he said, as part of a two-way trading relationship worth almost one billion rivals annually. Denmark last year exported SR350 million in goods and services to the Kingdom, and this year the Danish government expects that figure to increase to SR600 million, he said. Christophersen said he had briefed Yamani on the European Economic Community's pledge to conserve energy and hold oil import levels at their 1978 figure through 1985.

He said he had also held talks on the Middle East question with senior Saudi officials, and repeated to them a declaration by foreign ministers of the Nordic states two weeks ago that U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338 should be the basis for a comprehensive ME peace.

Kuwait warns against sedition

KUWAIT, Sept. 10 (R) — The Kuwaiti Premier, Sheikh Saad Al-Abdulla Al-Sabah, said in an interview published Monday that all those trying to tamper with the country's security and stability would be severely punished.

He told the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Watan that there were "irresponsible elements seeking to create sedition among the people and shake their confidence in the government."

believe the United States in particular cannot be judge and jury and cannot be neutral," he

He added: "I believe that the problem is one for the world organization to take and I believe that all the Arab parties concerned should be involved and in particular the Palestinians. This is not what is happening at King Hussein said he had discussed the Palestinian problem with PLO leader Yasser Arafat in Havana where they attended the nonaligned conference.

"We have spoken about many things," the king said. "I have met Yasser Arafat in Cuba, in Libya and in Jordan just a short while before I started on this trip."

He said that the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and other Arab occupied territories must be returned to their peoples to decide their future in total freedom.

King Hussein said he did not think that Egypt and Israel had achieved progress since the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty was signed. "I believe that the world knows what has been achieved or otherwise," he said. "I do not think, as far as we are concerned, that anything has been achieved."

The king, a frequent visitor to France, said he discussed the Middle East and other world problems with President Giscard d'Estaing.

Newsweek claims However Newsweek magazine claimed that Jordan and the PLO have revised the idea of reuniting the Israeli-occupied West Bank with Jordan in a confederation.

quoting Arab sources, Newsweek alleged that King Hussein would present the proposal to Carter at a meeting in Washington later this month.

Sadat indicates Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has recently indicated he expects Jordan to join in the Middle East peace talks. In an interview with NBC television's "Meet the Press" broadcast Sunday.

Sadat predicted Jordan, and possibily Palestinian leaders, would join the peace process by the and of the year. Agree to disagree

In Herzlia, Israel and Egypt agreed to disagree about East Jerusalem at the second round of talks on Palestinian autonomy Monday.

Spokesman for both the Israeli and Egyptian negotiating teams said the full ministerial authority committee would decide whether East Jerusalem should be included in the Palestinian autonomy plan.

The higher-level committee will meet in Alexandria in two weeks time with Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil representing Egypt and Interior Minister Yosef Burg, Israel.

President Carter's special envoy to the Middle East, Robert Strauss, is expected to represent the U.S.

But Strauss trying bard In Cairo Khalil said Monday Strauss was trying to speed up autonomy negotiations. Khalil, speaking to reporters following a three-hour session with Strauss, denied that Egypt wanted to slow down the autonomy talks, on which Egypt and Israel hold widely divergent views. 'If this is our intention, we would not have bothered Dr. Strauss to come to the area. It is exactly the contrary. We are trying to find the best way to speed up the process," he said. Khalil turned to Strauss and asked him:

'Isn't this the purpose of your mission here?" the U.S. envoy replied, " exactly." Both declined to go into details of the topics they had discussed.

Strauss, who arrived in Cairo Sunday on a trip that will also take him to Israel, continued: " It is not my intention today to go into any specificity on the substances we have talked about. I don't think it will serve the peace process well and I am just half-way in

He desribed his talks Monday with Khalil and Sunday with Sadat as a most detailed discussion on a wide-range of topics.

Dayan smiles in Bonn In Bonn Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan emerged smiling from a meeting with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher Monday and indicated that his country's trust in West Germany has been restored.

Dayan blamed the "news media" for recent West German-Israeli tension, and he said Monday's talks had removed a number of obstacles to better understanding between the two countries.

Israeli relations with West Germany have suffered because of meetings held between West German politicians and Yasser Arafat.

Fahd continues talks with Somalis, Kenyans

By a Staff Writer

TAIF, Sept. 10 - Crown Prince Fahd held separate meetings with the presidents of Kenya and Somalia Monday as he continued efforts to mediate the territorial dispute dividing the two African states.

Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi and Somali President Siad Barre arrived here Sunday for tripartite talks aimed at ending the long-simmering border dispute which has kept relations between them on edge for almost 20 years.

Sunday, the crown prince met first with Barre in his suite at the Al Hada Sheraton hotel, then later in the day met Moi and his delegation in the Kenyan leader's quarters in the same hotel.

No official communiques were issued after either meeting, and the Saudi Press Agency said only that the talks involved world problems, bilateral relations, and "some specific issues of interest to both countries."

In addition, in his meeting with Barre, the official news agency said, the crown prince also discussed Islamic problems.

While there was no word on any progress toward resolving the border dispute, which involves a 110,000 square mile area of land administered by Kenya, Saudi Arabia has made it known in the past that it was anxious to mediate the dispute.

The land in question, kown as the Northern Frontier District during the British colonial era, was incorporated into Kenya by the colonial power, but later claimed by Somalia. The population of the barren area is largely Muslim, as are the people of neighboring Relations between Kenya and Somalia have been strained over the issue since guerrillas in Northeast Kenya fought an unsucessful war to try and merge the enthnically, Somali area with Somalia from 1964 to 1967.

Both Kenyan and Somali delegations include, in addition to those state's presidents, a large number of their highest leaders, and many of them have been involved in the two days of talks so far. Second Deputy Premier and Commander of the National Guard Prince Abdullah and Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al Faisal participated in Monday's meetings with both men as part of the Saudi delegation.

The Somali contingent included Vice President Brig. Gen. Ismail Ali Abu Bakr and several other high-ranking officials, while the Kenyan side includes Attorney General Charles Njonjo and Foreign Minister Viuwua Waiyaki.

Vioi s visit here is the first visit by a Kenyan head of state to Saudi Arabia, and the first visit by a Kenyan leader to an Arab country since the death last year of President Jomo Kenyatta.

pute, the Kenya delegation is expected to talk about increasing Saudi investments in Kenya, bilateral trade matters, and oil.

South Korean minister in Jeddah Sept. 15

JEDDAH, Sept. 10 - Tong Jin Park, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Korea is due to arrive in Jeddah Sept. 15 for talks on boosting bilateral relations and other matters of mutual concern of both countries.

An embassy press release said here Monday the minister will discuss with Saudi officials the Middle East situation and cooperation in the fields of trade, agriculture, industry, natural resources, and culture between the two nations.

Carter rebuffs Jewish leaders

WASHINGTON Sept. 10 - President Carter refused to yield to pressure from U.S. Jewish leaders to make a public statement absolving Israel and American Jews of responsibility for Andrew Young's forced resignation, according to a report published here Monday.

American Jewish leaders last month urged the president to tell the public that Young left his post at the United Nations entirely of his own volition" and that his resignation was not the result of pressure from Israel or the U.S. Jewish community, said syndicated columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak.

The pleas from the Jewish community were directed to Carter through the president's chief domestic aide, Stuart Eizenstat, and Jewish affairs adviser Edward Sanders, the columnists said.

In a confidential memo, Eizenstat urged Carter to make the public statement during a speech Aug. 30 at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia — Young's hometown.

Islamic body protests BBC film screening

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP) - A television film of Harold Robbins' novel the Pirate was denounced Monday by the Islamic Council of Europe after it was screened last week by the British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC).

The film is "packed with distortions, lies and malicious influences," said council Secretary-General Salem Azzam in a statement. He called it "a crude and indecent attempt by the Zionists to tarnish the image of Islam," and "regretted that the BBC should have screened such an obnoxious piece of propaganda."

The two-part American film about an Arab tycoon who was born a Jew, starred Franco Nero, Eli Wallach and Olivia Hussey. Clive James, Australian film critic for London's Sunday Observer, said the film was "seemingly dedicated to proving that no matter how bad the movies get: television can be worse on a smaller budget."

said, primarily because the president could not check "the loss of Jewish support resulting from his bold Mideast policies without losing black support."

One White House aide who disagreed with Eizenstat was quoted as saying: "my feeling was very strong that anything the president said, no matter how carefully he said it, would risk worsening the situation, not neiving it." Jewish leaders had wanted Carter to tell his

Emory University audience that Young had resigned voluntarily in order to "have more freedom to speak out on his own without official restraints." Evans and Novak said this argument was "a bit hard to swallow, considering Young's unlicensed verbosity" while serving as America's U.N. ambassador.

Jewish leaders were "aghast" when Carter failed to include a statement in his Atlanta speech clearing Israel and U.S. Jews of responsibility for Young's departure, the columnists said.

"I was sure the president would get the blame off our backs," they quoted a prominent Jewish leader as saving. "But he must have decided he could not risk the political backlash of the blacks."

Meanwhile two prominent Black American leaders - Congressman Walter Fauntroy of Washington, D.C. and civil rights activist Rev. Jesse Jackson — will address a Palestinian human rights conference here later this month, organizers have announced. Fauntroy and Jackson were among the Black community leaders who met with the PLO's U.N. Observer Zehdi Labib Terzi last month in the wake of the Andrew Young

3-man summit ck on South Lebanon reported planned

BEIRUT, Sept. 10 (Agencies) - Contacts were underway Sunday for holding an emergency summit conference among Presidents Hafez Assad of Syria, Elias Sarkis of Lebanon and Chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization Yasser Arafat to discuss Israel's artillery attacks on southern Lebanese regions, newspapers reported

The newspaper An Nahar said Sarkis and the PLO leadership were so displeased with the "Arab and international silence" over the situation in South Lebanon that they were contemplating a threepower summit conference to deal with Israel's frequent attacks. Sarkis held a long meeting Saturday with Salah Khalaf, second-in-command of Arafat's PLO.

The proposed summit meeting is to take place within a week or two, the leftist newspaper Al Liwa said.

The barbaric, monstrous aggression on South Lebanon is proof of the ferocious conspiracy being hatched by American and Zionist powers against the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples," said Khalaf, codenamed Abu Iyyad, after his meeting with Sarkis. Khalaf said that the attacks on southern Lebanese villages were a "direct result of the (U.S.-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli) treaty of infamy and treason.

"In the face of this Arab and international silence over the troubled situation in the south, we have decided it was imperative to hold a meeting at the highest level between Syria, Lebanon and the PLO, to consider what we can do ourselves," said Khalaf in a statement distributed by the Palestine news agency Wafa.

He urged Arab states to "end this unjustifiable silence" and exert themselves with maximum moral and material support to Lebanon, Syria and the PLO.

Informed sources said Arab states have not been prompt in fullfilling their financial commitments to the PLO, Syria and Jordan. The Iraqi News Agency distributed a report Saturday night saying the Baghdad government has paid $ 520 million this year to Syria, Jordan and the PLO, in line with the Baghdad summit resolution for helping out "confrontation powers" directly involved in the conflict

Lebanon got nothing out of that summit in terms of financial backing, because it was not classified a confrontation power.

A two-week-old U.N.-mediated ceasefire was violated in South Lebanon on Friday, when Israeli-backed militia gunners shelled four hamlets in regions policed by the eight-nation, 5,800-strong United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon. In Kuwait meanwhile, a Kuwaiti government spokesman said Sunday that Lebanon has called for an Arab summit conference to discuss the situation in South Lebanon.

Speaking to reporters after a cabinet meeting the spokesman said President Sarkis, had asked for the summit in a letter handed to the ruler of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah Sunday. The letter, delivered by a Lebanese presidential envoy Rene Moawad, was discussed at the cabinet meeting, the spokesman said.

FRANKFURT, Sept. 10 (R) — ately looking for new energy Pakistani President Zia Ul Haq sources and faced great difficulties has said his country's nuclear program was more important than free elections.

During a stopover in Frankfurt on his return from the nonaligned summit in Cuba, President Zia dismissed reports that Pakistan was building an atomic bomb as

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 - More than 120 Jewish families who had immigrated to Israel from Morocco wish to go back to their original country, Arab News has learned

A representative of the families has met the Moroccan ambassador in Paris and asked him to convey a message to King Hassan II. They told the king that since their arrival in Israel, 20 years ago, they were put in wooden bangalows and completely forgotten.

He said that up to now China's military tacticians have been limited to following the principles set down by Mao on guerrilla warfare and the communist struggle without conducting any research or debate on military science.

"The time has come when we must study military science in accordance with the conditions of the present," Xiao said.

He noted that the Red Army, when it began the "Long March" from Guangxi in southern China in 1934, adhered to the idea of "retreat and draw your enemy in as far as possible." But he said that such tactics applied only to a time when the communist forces did not control the cities and had no industrial base.

Xiao said that the military must prepare texts which give serious study to Mao's ideas on warfare while advancing studies into modern military science.

Alfa Romeo also tasted bitter disappointment after its new 179 had impressed on its first Grand Prix appearance. Italian Bruno Giacomelli was pushing for sixth place when an error took him off the track and out of the race on the 29th lap.

But Alfa confirmed last night that the new car would race at Montreal on Sept. 30.

ARAB SUMMITS

I he question now being asked in Arab capitals is whether the is ripe for a new Arab summit, or whether it is better to leave this to a more opportune moment. The answer is still uncertain. While one side sees the need for a top level Arah meeting because of the recent changes in the Arab and international scene, another warns that it is possible that the outcome might prove a disaster, with differences in the anti-Camp David grouping accentuated rather than resolved.

The last Arab summit which met in Baghdad last year resolved at the time to meet again a year later, that is, sometime before, or just at the start of this November. Yet many Arab states hold the view that the anti-Camp David side has to meet sooner. Factors like the expected results of the Security Council meeting this month, and the evident worsening of relations among some members of the grouping, are seen as requiring speedy and resolute actions.

In our view, the question of the timing has to take second place. The real question is whether a summit, whenever it is to be held, will prove once more to be a mere reaction to events unfolding outside Arab control, or one of planning and anticipation, aiming at directing or controlling events. For too long have Arab summits been of the former kind. For too long ad hoc reactions to pressing events has been the norm rather than the exception.

A quick look at the history of Arab summitry would show that three meetings were of outstanding importance, coming as they did at crucial stages in the history of the Middle East. In each case the effects of the resolutions taken proved to be short-lived. In each case the problems the meetings reacted to outlived those resolutions.

First, there was the Khartoum Summit just after the 1967 war. This sought to answer the shattering defeat of Arab arms by all the support the Arabs could muster to help sustain the frontline states. The "Three Nos" it enunciated (No recognition of, no negotiations with, no peace with, Israel) expressed fully the will of the Arab nation to deny Israel the intended fruit of her aggression, which was Arab capitulation.

Then there was the Rabat Summit in the aftermath of the October war of 1973, with all the changes this brought into the Arah and world scene. Here the "Three Nos" found themselves shelved; with the appearance of the first demands for a political solution for the Middle East crisis. Against this, the Palestine Liberation Organization was recognized as sole representative of the Palestinian people, and given responsibility instead of Jordan for the West Bank of the Jordan River. This was to facilitate its entry into any peace process which Arabs might find acceptable, and meant recognition on the Arab side that the Palestinians were at the heart of the problem as a

In other words this meant that the Khartoum Summit was more a war than a peace gathering; with the Rabat Summit being the opposite. At that time, there was hope for a Geneva peace conference. Yasser Arafat, leader of the PLO, made his historic visit to the United Nations, offering the world a choice between the gun and the olive branch. Suleiman Frenjia, then President of Lebanon, spoke in the General Assembly on behalf of Arab leaders, supporting the

Yet the united stand expressed by the "spirit of Rabat" soon gave way to the 'separate peace' approach, exemplified by Egypt, which was soon to culminate in the Camp David agreement between that country and Israel. This brings us to the third summit, convened in Baghdad in November of last year in answer to this most dangerous development. While the resolutions stemming from it were not in themselves wanting, it was clear that its effectiveness had already, in a sense. been preempted be events. That it would remain imprisoned in its being a reaction after the event rather an effective anticipation. Inaddition, as time passed, the united Arab strategy which was to flow from these resolutions failed to materialise, for all the talk about it and enthusiasm towards it. This tardiness and lack of practical policies is at the heart of the present Arab paralysis in the face of the present dilemmas posed by the so-called "peace process", and by America's waverings between it and a never clarified "new initiative for a more comprehensive

The new developments certainly require consultation and coordination, towards a unified anti-Camp David strategy. Before that, the new fissures in the ranks need to be closed, if effective response is to be made to the Israeli-Egyptian-American moves. If the proposed summit can guarantee this, then welcome to it. If it is to be merely an arena for inter-Arab rivalries and empty rhetoric, then we could do

Consequences of a killing

By George Brock
Mullaghmore, Irish Republic — Three hundred vards off Ireland's rocky Atlantic shore a grisly jigsaw is being pieced together. Twenty feet below two orange buoys bobbing in the blue water, police divers grope in the seaweed for fragements of the boat explotion which killed Lord Mountbatten.

Shockwaves have spread across the world from the pretty village in the warm sun which became the scene of four murders last Bloody Monday. Ten years after troops first appeared on the streets of Northern Ireland the IRA carried out its most brutal slaughter both north and south of the border.

A helicopter throbs above Mullaghmore and dark blue patrol cars are parked on the quay. Roads are full of shirtsleeved policemen handing questionnaires to holiday tourists. Special Branch detectives toting Uzi sub- machine-guns are occasionally visible. 'IRA' can just be read in faint blue paint on the harbor wall. The local council has twice taken down the words' Brits out' written on the hillside in cement fragments. The third time it reappeared, they gave up.

Patient, weary procedures observed by the police have yielded no positive leads to the men who murdered the IRA's most prestigious target ever. Ireland's Deputy Prime Minister George Colley said that suspects' names were known to the police. He said that his government was offering a reward for information of $ 200,000. Pieces of Mountbatten's 29-foot cruiser Shadow V are handed up the quay in brown envelopes and plastic bags. Uniformed officers knock on front doors for house-to-house inter-

Fifteen miles away -- past the cemetery holding the grave of Irish poet W.B. Yeats who wrote of his country's terrible beauty - the three survivors lie seriously injured in hospital. Besides Lord Mountbatten, the explosion killed his 14-year-old grandson, a young local boatman and the 82-year-old dowager Lady Brabourne.

The 79-year-old earl was a familiar and wellliked holidaymaker bere. Every August he stayed with his family at Classiebawn Castle, a towered and castellated grey-stone building dominating the grassy promontory. Bank Holiday Monday was the last day of this year's stay. 'He really believed he had no one to be afraid of in the area,' said one policeman.

After a Monday morning breakfast of fish and porridge with his family and the castle's owner, businessman Hugh Tunney, Lord Mountbatten played briefly with his grandchildren before getting into his blue Peugeot to go to the harbor. Tunney was invited to join the boat party but stayed at the castle to say his rosary.

The boat left the harbor and moved up the coast toward the Mountbatten family lobster pots, watched through binoculars by two policemen shadowing the boat from the shore road.

Eyewitness Dennis Devlin, aged 14, described what happened next: 'I recognized Lord Mountbatten's boat because everybody here knows it. It was coming toward me and there was a terrific explosion. The whole boat blew up in the air and came down in little pieces. There were bodies in the water and people screamed.

Contrary to many reports, Lord Mountbatten was given police protection in Ireland. Up to five police officers, including armed Special Branch men, guarded the castle round the clo ck. When the earl went anywhere by car he was shadowed. But the protection was designed principally against shooting, not bombing.

Three years ago the watch had been even closer: policemen went on the boat trips and it was sepa-rately guarded. Lord Mountbatten protested and security was relaxed. Between 11.30 a.m. on the Sunday, when the boat came back from the day's sailing, and the Monday morning Shadow V was only visited at intervals by the police.

Although the quay is well lit at night, detectives admit that it would have been possible for terrorists to have planted the 50-pound charge on the boat during Sunday night. Officers describe the bomb as being probably the size of a large bucket and they think that it was probably hidden in the three-foot space under the cabin floor.

Scientific experts think that the bomb exploded amidships disintegrating most of the woodwork; no pieces so far seen or recovered are larger than sixfoot long. They are embarking on a slow reconstruction of what is left of the boat.

They are comparing notes with two British security force units: Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad and the British Army's Weapons Intelligence Unit at their headquarters near Belfast. The London detectives may provide comparisons with the type of bomb which killed Conservative Northern Ireland spokesman Airey Neave last April.

The Weapons Intelligence Unit was founded in 1974 to combat new Provisional IRA radio-control bombs. These have been used to kill policemen in Northern Ireland and to booby-trap trains hijacked on the Dublin to Belfast railway. The Unit devised an electronic system which blew up two IRA bombers along with their explosives which they were priming with a remote control device. The IRA devices are based on radio equipment of the type used to direct model boats and planes. They can be bought over the counter at most toy and model shops. Police experts think that Lord Mountbatten's killers could have been as far as half a mile away from the boat when they detonated their bomb. (OFNS)

Can Jerry Brown be Curbed?

By William Scobie

SACRAMENTO, California, California's Governor Jerry Brown along the White House trail against Jimmy Carter last weekend with a political raid on New Hampshire, site of America's first Presidential primary.

He leaves behind millions of Californian liberals who — despite overall approval of the agile Brown - hope he will fall on his face. Local party leaders especially are distressed at the prospect of a Brown victory. For that would hand governorship of the nation's largest state to his deputy, a youthful, ambitious, multi-millionaire record producer who is also a diehard Republican.

For months past Brown, 42, and Lieutenant Governor, Mike Curb, 34. California's top two elected officials, have crossed swords in a power struggle with national reverherations which has triggered a feud in the state legislature.

Now the governor is suing his flamboyant lieutenant: he wants a ruling from the state Supreme Court on precisely what powers Curb may wield when the chief executive is out of the state as he will be more and more often as the presidential race picks up.

Twice already, when Brown's back was turned, acting-Governor Curb has snatched the chance to make headline-grabbing decisions and appointments. 'Mike wants Jerry's job,' says one leading Democrat, even worse than Jerry wants the presi-

Californians are greeting the Mike and Jerry show with a mixture of derision and dismay, but they have themselves to thank for it. When voters last November picked a governor and lieutenant Governor from rival parties, for the first time since 1894, both men swore, limply, to work in a 'spirit of

The spirit wasn't willing, Curb took advantage of a Brown trip to Washington to appoint a conserva-tive judge to higher office. 'He knew we'd already picked a moderate for the job,' says a Brown aide.

The Governor filed suit, asking the Supreme Court to nullify Curb's appointment and clarify the state constitution on a lieutenant governor's powers during the chief executive's absence or illness.

Curbites charged that the Administration was trying to rewrite the Constitution so that Brown might run for President.' The Governor's legal advisors riposted that the constitutional article in debate was written in 1849, when, if a Governor merely crossed into a next-door state, he was indeed out of touch.

"In times of instant world communications," said Anthony Kilne, a top legal aide, "it's absurd to say the governor cannot be consulted. He's as much in touch in Washington or London as in Sacramento."

While this row was stewing, Curb struck again. Brown was off conferring with President Carter on the state's gasoline crisis last May. In defiance of administration policy, the lieutenant governor jumped in with an executive order lowering California's air-pollution standards to allow more refining of leaded fuel.

That move set off a slapstick chase. The governor's staff found an error in the order which invalidated it. Curb leapt into his chauffeured limousine and sped back from San Francisco to Sacramento, the state capital, to sign new papers.

Meanwhile, Brown had boarded a DC-10 bound for the same destination. Could Curb make it to the office before Brown entered California air-space? Despite a wild ride at speeds of up to 90 mph and through a string of red lights, he lost the race by a Curb still insisted that his order was legal. Brown said it wasn't. Again, the courts must decide. Beneath the public squabble lies personal antipathy. The two men could scarcely be more different, except in their ambitions.

Brown is spartan, despises excess, lacks social graces, jogs for miles at dawn, is liable to appear after midnight on the doorstep of his controversial leftist allies Jane Fonda and Tom Hayden to talk

Mike Curb is a showbiz right-winger in the Reagan mould, with a plush home and the obligatory swimming pool in the Hollywood hills, where his study is lined with 50 gold and platinum records prizes of the company he still owns.

Recently the pair met for a 'summit'. Instead of resolving their differences, it pulled them further apart. Curb came away saying he would carry on competing: "The people of California asked for this kind of balance when they elected me with 52 per cent of the vote."

"How can I trust him?" asked Brown. "He's a promoter who's made millions in the record business. Now he's on a public relations offensive against me.

The Brown camp charges that Curb, at the behest of his Republican peers, is working to sabotage the governor's presidential bid. Certainly he is missing no opportunity to snipe at Brown, especially at his relationship with Ms. Fonda — 'Hanoi Jane.'

If Brown fails to put Curb on a leash, his White House hopes could be blasted. (OFNS)

New rumblings in the Basque country

By William Cemlyn-Jones

At nine o'clock on the morning of Aug. 30 a three-man commando hidden behind a lorry at the railway station in Zumarraga, Guipuzcoa, opened fire on a squad of national policemen with Parabellum machine pistols. A 25-year-old policeman fell dead, riddled with bullets, while the gunmen made their getaway in a small van.

The murder of a policeman or a civil guard in the war-torn Basque provinces is no longer a page one story, even in Spain. But Zumarraga station shootup may have been rather different.

The shots which killed Jose Maria Perez Rodriguez, though a minor skirmish, could well have signalled the start of the biggest terrorist offensive ever staged by the military wing of the Basque extremist organization ETA. The new campaign of violence is codenamed "Operation September."

According to well-informed sources here, 300 picked guerrilla fighters from ETA-militar have been sent to an unnamed North African country for intensive training and have been equipped with new weapons purchased in Belgium. According to these reports, 100 members of this terrorist elite have already returned to Spain, and one commando squad is believed to be stationed in a 'safe house' in Madrid. It is also believed that "Operation September" will be directed against the Spanish armed forces. Further reports indicate that an assault against a military barracks — possible in Madrid is planned, and four high-ranking army officers and one senior naval officer have been listed as targets for assassination.

In Spain, the national police and the Guarda Civil are all part of the armed forces and are therefore considered legitimate targets, indeed an occupying force in the Basque country, by ETA-militar.

But it is at least possible that the Zumarraga shooting was premature. Incidentally, also early that Thursday morning ETA planted two powerful time bombs in the offices of the Renault and the Citroen companies in Bilbao, both defused by the police without causing any casualties. ETA today has equally murderous intentions towards the French as it has towards the Spanish.

Another possibility is that ETA's higher command has decided to advance the original D-day for "Operation September" because of the assassination of Lord Mountbatten, the massacre of the British troops in Northern Ireland and the Brussels bombing by the IRA Provos.

The IRA Provos and the ETA-militar are undoubtedly very closely allied. While it is not easy to fathom the terrorist mentality, there could be a certain rivalry between the two organizations, and a wish on the part of ETA to maintain the momentum of violence on the spectacular scale in order to prove their point that bombs and bullets are more effective than ballots.

The IRA-ETA connection was the subject of an editorial in the respected liberal daily newspaper El Pais last Thursday. "It is a proven fact," it said, "that ETA and the IRA maintian more or less permanent close contacts. The IRA offensive must increase the suspicion that ETA-militar is prepared, if Basque autonomy does not develop according to its ideas, to augment its armed action and seek in our country results as spectacular as the assassination of Lord Mountbatten." The newspaper considers that ETA and the IRA "operate in a similar ideological territory in which extreme nationalism, tinged with Marxism, finds its roots in the local Catholic churches."

It seems likely that the Provos have destroyed all hopes of a united Ireland for at least a generation. ETA-militar are hell-bent on wrecking the statute of Guernica and destroying the hopes of all moderate Basques for a modest measure of home rule before the year's end. The home rule statute was hammered out in the Moncloa Palace, the Prime Minister's official residence in Madrid last June.

On October 25 a referendum will be held in the Basque country, and the Basque (with the exception of Navarrans) will be asked to approve their home rule statute. Almost certainly a large majority will approve. Then it only remains for the Cortes, the Spanish parliament, to pass the Bill - which it most certainly will do - and the King to append his signature, and the Basque will achieve the home rule which they sought for so long. -- (OFNS)

By Joyce Prince RIYADH - What has happened to the Bedouin way of life once so commonplace in Saudi Arabia?

It has not, for one, disappeared. Thousands of Saudis still prefer the nomadic, pastoral life of the desert, the goatskin tents, the flocks.

But a rising generation of Saudi youth in the Kingdom's major cities - and certainly the hundreds of thousands of foreign workers living there - may have little familiarity with the Bedovin

Riyadh's Museum of Antiquities has obviated this ignorance somewhat with an exhibition built around the Bedouin tent. A full replica of a Bedouin's home in the desert, right on down to the small bits of jewelry and toilet items of a Bedouin wife, can be seen at the museum.

The exhibit was planned under the direction of Dr. Abdullah Masry, the museum's director and one of the Kingdom's top experts in archeology and history.

"The government has for many years been concerned for the nomadic peoples," he said, "and they have set up certain areas of the desert subsidizing their way of life to preserve their cultural iden-

Despite the massive changes underway in the Kingdom, Masry feels that between 10 and 15 per cent of the Kingdom's population will continue the ancient Bedouin

"To say that the Bedouin life in all its intrinsic meaning will be forgotten is unfounded," he asserts.

Why they remain, and how the onslaught of urbanization and industrialization will affect their lives, are questions today for anthropologists interested in the Bedouin peoples of Arabia. In reviewing the exhibit, however, Masry has several explanations:

"Home means a lot of things to lot of people," he says. "To the Bedouin it means freedom, peace, and a known, comfortable way of living.

"Within the confines of a Bedouin tent," he explains, "life is carried on in the same mode as in any other society. The avenues of survival are just a little more harsh."

There are usually three partitions of the tent: the kitchen, the sleeping room (also used for the ladies sitting room) and the mens sitting room.

Each area is covered with carpets to keep out the sand and dust, and rooms are divided by heavy woven blankets.

The kitchen is at one end, containing the many necessary items for cooking. The mortar and pest made of stone for grinding grains; the wooden tripod for hanging the goat skin filled with milk, allows the women and girls to make butter and cheese. Hanging from the top of the tripod, is a large hollow gourd (dibba) in which to store the finished foods.

A large round palm leaf mat is often hung on the blanket division for decoration and also for a table cloth during meal time. Sitting closely beside the wooden, round-topped spice boxes, is a date container, in the shape of a small bee hive, made from woven reeds in the form of a basket.

Nearer to the outside opening (more convenient to the water well) of the kitchen are two or three goat skins filled with flour for the making of bread. There are two favorite ways of bread making: a large flat stone is put over two smaller rocks and the fire is made underneath. The bread batter is made from one or two kilos of flour mixed with water and salt into a medium paste. The batter is picked up rapidly in both hands and spread over the hot flat stone above the fire, where it is left for a few seconds and then rapidly turned and removed after a few more seconds. The result is a large thin bread called "shrak."

Found among the many kitchen articles were two small wooden paddles (similar to ping pong paddles, only square) with handles containing myriads of tiny bent wires protruding upwards. These are used to rake over the tent fabric to clean it of dirt and sand.

The middle room is used during the day for the living area of the women and children and at night for the family's sleeping quarters. Here the feminine articles of the household may be seen. The clothing is hung on ropes across the back of the room, and if one looks closely the wedding dress of the wife is hanging along with the other garments of the family.

Near the bed mat (which at one time were straw mats and are now likely to be brightly colored foam rubber pads) is a small wooden chest, not unlike the larger chests known to be given at the time of marriage. It is sectioned off to hold jewelry, buttons and cherished mementos, and the bottom larger area often holds the Holy Koran along with other books.

The ladies' paraphernalia is further enhanced by the small wooden dressing table, with mirror and small drawer. Near this is a round, long-spouted metal container with wrought designs for the ladies' perfumery.

A child's wooden toy in the form of a camel on wheels stands below the leather baby cradle (like a small hammock) that hangs from the ceiling for rocking.

The third and largest area is for the men after a day's work. Here he makes coffee for his friends, a favorite, ritual which began in the tents and continues in the homes of some very urban Saudis. Desert coffee beans are first dried in a wooden tray and then fried over an open fire of desert bush or camel dung, in a long-handled, flat iron spoon. They are stirred by a much smaller but similar longhandled spoon until the color and smell is just right.

The beans are pounded with cardamon seeds in a brass mortar, and then brewed in a small pot. The leftover coffee is put in a larger pot and kept for use later in the day.

Leaning on a wooden bench used as a small saddle for a camel the man of the tent discusses news of the desert, listening perhaps to the lines of poetry offered by an eloquent member of a tribe, and at different times majlis are held. (The word for sitting is "majlis," for which the area or room is named, and also refers to the term used for the discussions by the male members of guidance and council.)

In this room the guns of the famare kept as well as the knives for hunting. By custom ladies seldom enter this area.

Outside, depending on the location and season of their camp, a wooden wheel with attach? ropes waits the pull for water from the well. If no well is close by, a smaller wooden wheel will be found among the came is gear to be used to draw up the animal water pouches from the wells along the

Standing beside the camel saddies that are hung on ropes from the tent to a tree or to a branch in the ground is found the "shoogdoof," a framed conveyance that fits on the top of the camel's back Elaborately covered with bright curtains and tassels, it was used to carry women and children on long voyages across the desert. It was also customary to use the shoogdoof in the marriage ceremony to carry the bride from her home to the home of the groom. In the 1975-1980 Five Year Plan, programs have been started to integrate Bedouin nomads into the fast-changing Saudi Society. # Dolly doesn't feed Daisy anymore

COMPUTERED COW FEEDER: Sadly, it appears the days are fast disappearing when Dolly the dairy maid would trip over to the cow shed and give Daisy her morning feed. It seems there is hardly any human contact with animals left in modern farming anymore. For example, when an anonymous cow sticks its head into the "feeding station" at Edmund Ebeling's modern farm in Kirchhorst near Hanover, a certain amount of feed will fall down into the trough, or it may not. The animal has a sensor attached to a collar around its neck which announces its presence to a computer that is connected to the feed silo. The "electronic dairyman," into which individual values are programed for every cow, then decides how much feed should be provided. A feeding day is divided into four parts so that dairy cows can eat a maximum of one-fourth of their daily ration in a given six-hour period.

SKI BREAK: Courage has always been the hallmark of the United States Barefoot Ski Team Champion, Bob Bemmon. And he proved it recently, when he took to the waters, against his doctor's orders, with a plaster cast on his right leg. Bob decided that such a small thing was not going to stop him practising for the championships. Here Bob steams across the water at 42 mph in readiness for an event at the Cypress Gardens Ski center in Florida.

TREASURE ORE: Fifteen tugboatmen were on course for a fortune last month following a high seas drama. For the crews of three tugs brought an abandoned Liberian-registered ore carrier to safe anchorage at Kirkwall Bay in the Orkneys. And the salvage bounty from the 18,750-ton Vida could be $ 4.5 million. The Vida, carrying 30,000 tons of iron ore was on passage from Canada to England, when a fuel pipe fractured. The engines died as she sailed through the treacherous Pentland Firth, Scotland. Distress messages were radioed then the 26-man crew took to the lifeboats as the Vida wallowed helplessly in thick fog, heading for dangerous rocks. A harbour launch from Kirkwall and the three tugs-Kessock, Keston and Kinloch which work around North Sea oil installations-arrived on the scene. Then the tugs towed the stricken vessel to safety. The three tugs are seen with their "fortunate" salvage prize in tow.

PRISON COMEDY: The British have a penchant for making money and fun out of the most unfikely subjects. Prison life for example has been the main diet for some of Britain's leading comedians... The bleak cell, the unending discipline and their only view through the cold iron bars Fortmately, they were not imprisoned for breaking the law of the land. Rather the incarceration was all part of a new film in England that depicts the life and struggles of the habitual prisoner Norman Stanley Fletcher (known as 'Fletch' to his friends) and his cell-mate Godher. Called 'Porridge' (that's stang in England for going to prison) the series has already been a spectacular success on televison throught the world. And now it has been transfered to the big screen and people are flocking in their millions to see it. 'Porridge' is written by Dick Clement and Ian Ia Frenais (one of the most successful in Britain), produced by Allan McKeown and Ian Ia Frenais and Directed By Dick Clement. Picture left shows the warden at Slade prison, England... Mr. Mackay (played by Fulton Mackay) who makes the stay of 'Fletch', detained at Her Majesty's Pleasure, as unpleasant as possible.

LONDON, Sept. 10, (AP) -Former Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan warned the Conservative Government Monday that any plans to sell Britain's North Sea oil and gas resources would be like selling " the seed com of the future.

Callaghan, leader of the Labor opposition in the House of Commons, was responding to recent reports in the British press that Margaret Thatcher's Tory Government was about to sell Britain's North Sea assets worth $ 70 to $ 900 million.

" If these reports are true, I must warn you that such a decision would become a major issue between us going far beyond the

It said that Iraq, which sells almost three million barrels a day of crude had told its customers, the present contracts had become "inappropriate" owing to changed circumstances. The oil industry sources said that in its talks with the oil companies. Iraq appeared to be simply seeking ways of raising its oil price nearer the $ 23.50 ceiling imposed by OPEC on all crude oil sales by its members since July.

Iraq sells its crude oil for less than $ 20 a barrel now but similar oil from neighboring Iran is being sold at more than $ 21 and this may be one reason for Iraq's efforts to obtain a higher price, the sources said.

Iraq earlier this year was pressing for the inclusion of a "most favored seller" clause in its sales contracts which would force buyers to pay a price similar to that for the highest priced oil they buy.

GATT reports Global trade outpaced total 1978 production

GENEVA, Sept. 10 (R) - World trade grew faster last year than in 1977, outpacing world production and amounting to about $ 1,300 billion the leading agency monitoring international commerce said Monday.

In an annual report the Secretariat of the 84-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) said this trade figure represented an increase of 16 per cent in value, two per cent higher Measured by volume of trade the rise was nearly six per cent, compared with 4.5 per cent the previous year.

World production, in mining, manufacturing and agriculture, but excluding services and construction, was up by nearly four per cent a slower rise than in 1977, the GATT report said.

The report said inflation rose sharply from around mid-1978 and into the first half of 1979 both in West Europe, where economic growth speed up, and in North American where growth slowed

Current exchange rates were more variable than in any year since 1973. A substantial increase in the price of crude oil during the first half of this year added a new element of uncertainty.

The report said the difference between value and volume in world trade growth was due to a rise of nearly 10 per cent in dollar unit values. This statistical change reflected inflation of domestic prices of goods entering world trade, and depreciation of the exchange rate of

Dollar depreciation was considerably more pronounced than in 1977, and could be roughly estimated to have contributed about half the increase in dollar unit values of world trade, GATT said.

In developing countries outside OPEC the annual inflation rate was roughly estimated to have been 25 per cent in December last year, a little lower than in previous years. But it accelerated again in the first half of 1979.

The report said manufacturing output in third world countries increased by six per cent, about the same rate as the previous year. In OPEC countries the volume and value of exports declined slightly. Imports increased by about one-fifth in value, but showed only a slight rise in volume.

In OPEC states with higher incomes import volume increased, although more slowly than in previous years, but it declined in member states with lower incomes, reflecting constraints imposed by their deteriorating balance of payments.

Kuwait will sell oil to Malta

KUWAIT, Sept. 10 (R) -Kuwait has agreed to sell oil to Malta and extend it a $ 5 million credit, a government spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said Malta would also get a $ 20,000 grant from the Kuwait health ministry to buy ambulances. Kuwaiti Petroleum Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah would meet Maltese authorities at an undisclosed date to discuss their oil requirements, the spokesman said. The oil will be sold at the official price, he added.

The five-day congress, which is held every four years, will also look at such questions as oil exploration, drilling, storage, conservation and environmental issues.

According to oil sources another likely topic is a Soviet proposal to standardize terms by drawing up an international glos-sary of technical data used in the oil industry.

But radicals gain key victories

Nonaligned still on neutral course

HAVANA, Sept. 10, (Agencies) — The 96-member nonaligned movement Monday looked set on a course independent of the two superpowers, but radical states led by Cuba appeared to have gained the upper hand on several key issues.

The grouping's sixth summit conference. ended in Havana Sunday after a marathon overnight final session.

The summit's final declaration reaffirmed the grouping's independence from either

The most acrimonious part of the six-day conference was a tense debate over whether to expel Egypt from the movement it helped to fund 18 years ago.

It ended with Egypt's membership still intact, but it was effectively put on probabtion and its treaty with Israel was condemned as damaging to the Arab nations and the Palestine people.

The conference agreed to appoint an ad hoc commission to study the question of whether Egypt, a founding member of the movement, should be allowed to retain its membership.

Cuban Premier Fidel Castro was able to win conference approval for condemnation of U.S. policies in the Middle East, Latin America and Southern Africa.

But Yugoslavian President Josip Tito managed to blunt Castro's effort to put the movement on record in implicit support of Soviet foreign policy objectives. The declaration reaffirmed the "validity of the principles of nonaligned.

As host for the conference which attracted 54 heads of government representatives of 138 countries and more than 1,000 journalists. Cuba earned the right to preside over the movement until the next summit, set for 1982 in Baghdad.

Castro, mindful of criticism that he may try to make nonaligned policy an extension of his own pro-Soviet policies, promised that his stewardship will be designed to benefit the movement and not Cuba.

for leaving Cambodia's seat vacant. They nonaligned movement's lengthiest statements contended that the deposed Khmer Rouge regime in Cambodia should be entitled to occupy the seat until the conference decides otherwise.

The final declaration bitterly attacked Western powers for "collaborating" with South Africa. It also accused them of interfering in the internal affairs of developing countries and hampering liberation movements around the world.

The economic section of the document painted a gloomy picture of a widening gap between rich and poor nations and said the developed world was selfish and inflexible in its economic dealings.

The declaration condemned Israel and called for a mandatory and total embargo against it directed by the United Nations. Critism of foreign domination was repeated throughout the length of the declaration, this showed the effects on the original draft of amendments pushed through by Yugoslavia, an opponent of any swing in favour of Moscow, delegates said.

The declaration also praised countries which " opted for an independent political development and have resolutely rejected polarisation on bloc bases."

The document gave as one of the nonaligned's most powerful demands military and other support for black liberation guerrilla movements. It called for supplies of equipment, finance and training.
It praised Communist and Scandinavian countries for their help to the guerrillas. The summit called on oil-exporting countries to end sales to South Africa and impose sanctions on companies which sent fuel there. The declaration also reiterated nonaligned policy on the Middle East by demanding Israel's withdrawal from occupied territories, supporting the Palestine Liberation Organization and effectively endorsed the use of force in opposition to the Middle East peace treaties. It said such a means was justified against any solution "detrimental to the inalienable rights of the Palestinian People." The declaration included one of the on human rights, which demanded that the basic rights of all minorities and peoples as well as individuals be guaranteed.

Syria has accused unnamed pro-American deviates in the nonaligned movement of having tried unsuccessfully to prevent the approval of resolutions condemning the Camp David accords. Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam made the charge to Syrian journalists as he flew home from Havana early Monday with President Hafez Al-Assad. Khaddam did not identify the countries involved, but said their aim was to" split the nonaligned movement. These countries tried to " draw the attention of the (Havana) summit to the energy crisis and the international economic situation, hinting that the Arabs are responsible for the problems facing the world," he

The Syrian Foreign Minister accused the U.S. of supporting this line through ' camouflaged American journalists" who, he said, tried to influence participating dele-Khaddam said efforts made by the countries concerned to "divert the attention of the movement and bring it nearer to the American stand have failed?

He also accused the Egyptian and Senegalese delegates of "defying" the summit by attacking the draft resolution on the Middle East.

The adoption of the resolutions concerning the Arab-Israeli conflict and the Israeli-Egyptian accords "with such enthusiasm. confirms the isolation of the Egyptian regime and the failure of the American policies," he

In Israel, Prime Minister Menahem Begin Monday criticised the Havana nonaligned summit conference, saying it was paradoxical that it condemned Israel's peace agreement

Begin said the Havana resolutions would not deter Israel and Egypt from following the demning, illogical, unreasonable and unjus-tified words. We shall continue our efforts. The peace treaty will be carried out as it was signed," he said. In its final declaration the conference saluted Malta's elimination of foreign military bases from last March 31 and pledged support for the Mediterranean island.

A special section in the 35,000-word document said the withdrawal of the bases was a victory for the nonaligned movement and a long-range contribution to the establishment of a zone of security, peace and cooperation in the Mediterranean.

Maltese delegate Joseph Brincat told the conference on Friday the elimination of bases had affected the island's economy but its people's decision was decisive.

"Malta will still be strategic, but for peace," he said.

The conference recommended memberstates to respond without delay to Maltese requests for economic, financial and political guarantees to preserve its sovereignty and non-aligned status. An immediate resumption of talks between the leader of the Turkish Cypriot and declaration document.

It demanded the immediate implementation of United Nations resolutions over Cyprus, a member of the movement.

The 96-member grouping called for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all foreign armed forces and every other military presence from the Republic of Cyp-

It declared support for the 10 point agreement reached last May between Cypriot President Spyros Kypriannou and Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash, and urged them immediately to resume their talks.

The conference here also welcomed a proposal by Kypriannou "for the total demilitarization and disarmament of Cyprus... as a significant contribution to the search for a solution to the Cyprus problem."

Meanwhile Radio Hanoi, monitored in Bangkok, quoted an editorial of the official Vietnamese newspaper Nhan Dan as saying, "in the history of the nonaligned movement no summit conference has been so great and so important."

The editorial gave special attention to the decision of the conference to leave the Camdia seat vacant until the next nonaligned meeting in 1981.

Good Morning

By Jihad Khazen

A two-vear-old story which would not have seen the light of day had it not been for the recent changes in Iran.

The Iranian ambassador to a certain Arab country invited me once for lunch. I agreed to go, yet resolved to remain on my toes: Savak, I thought, I smell Savak," although there is nothing more natural than a meeting between an ambassador and a journalist.

Lunch was attended by three or four others, all embassy officials. Conversation was innocent, mostly about the day's news, American elections, the rising cost of living, that sort of thing. Two or three weeks later, the whole incident was forgotten.

It returned suddenly to me when, out of the blue, I received about a whole kilogram of choicest Iranian caviar, as a new year gift, While not really a "caviar man", I at least know it is very expensive. There was no lack of friends volunteering to help consume it.

Soon this too passed out of mind. Two weeks later, another invitation to lunch with the ambassador arrived. This clinched it for me. The first "peaceful" lunch and the expensive gift were nothing but bait for this further session. Now the Savak man is really to go to work. Will he, I wondered, stop at friendly persuasion. What ordeal awaits me this time. Surprisingly, things went quietly enough this time too. There were only the two of us. The ambassador talked exclusively about literature, and I made the surprising discovery that he wrote Arabic poetry, and had published in both Beirut and Damascus, He had be said, masses of unpublished work.

"Savak," I thought again. "Arabic poetry", I thought, "what a charming smokescreen". I was sure he was merely bidding his time. I kept thinking in this way even after meeting his family, his sisters, his nieces, and become part of their circle.

My long cherished illusions about the ambassador's "dangerousness" finally shattered when he rushed into my office one day, dancing with joy, telling me that he had cabled his foreign ministry in Tehran for permission to publish his love lyrics in my paper, and that they had agreed. He dumped a hefty manuscript on my desk, and asked me to select what I saw fit for publication. There was nothing I could do, since I had already praised his poetry skyhigh, playing what I thought then was his game of hiding his dangerous intentions behind the smokescreen of Arabic poetry. had already promised him publication, thinking that all this talk of poetry was a sham. I took the manuscript home, and sat all night reading it. Luckily, some of his work was publishable. I thought to publish this part first and then see how to get out of doing the rest. And, as it happened, the troubles started in Iran, leading to the fall of the Shah, and the ambassador forgot to keep in touch. I moved to London, and heard that he was retired, then all contact with him was lost.

I had almost forgotten my friend the ambassador laureate again, until Mustafa Amin's "Idea" column a few days ago, when he wrote of the hidden wish of every political leader to become a journalist. It appears now that ambassadors think like their leaders Some of them have been buying newspapers ready-made, moving into them as into hotels It is perhaps lucky for journalists that not all ambassadors are millionaires.

Mugabe conciliatory on Rhodesia future

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP) — Guerrilla chief Robert Mugabe urged Britain Monday to set up a transition administration in Zimbabwe Rhodesia giving a "predominant" role to the guerrillas, but including Britain and representatives of the current blackdominated administration his forces are fight-

Mugabe, who heads of the largest of the two guerrilla armies, spelled out his peace terms shortly before British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington was due to open the new Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace conference here. The talks, called by Britain which is still technically the colonial power in the strifetorn nation of 7 million blacks and 230,000 whites, start amid predictions of slim chances of success. Britain hopes the protagonists, the Patriotric Front guerrilla movement headed by Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, and the multiracial administration of black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa, will agree on a new constitution before tackling the fundamental question of whose forces will comprise and control the military.

Previous initiatives, including the last peace conference in Geneva in 1976, foundered on the military issue.

In a British Broadcasting Corp. interview Mugabe reiterated that the Communistarmed guerrilla forces should form the 'core" of the new arm

But unlike many of his top aides and Nkomo himself who often demand the total dismantling of the country's white-led army and air force, Mugabe said: "We do agree to

Death toll rises

Second storm lashes Caribbean

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP) - Residents of storm-ravaged Caribbean islands, lashed again over the weekend by tropical Storm Frederic, continued to dig out from the devastation as the death toll mounted.

A spokesman for the Dutch Marines said Frederic left 11 persons dead on St. Maarten. And the prime minister of Dominica, Oliver Serraphine, said Hurricane David left 38 persons dead and 60,000 homeless when it hit the island eight days ago.

The Dutch Marine said Sunday that eight fishermen died when their boat broke its mooring and drifted onto rocks, and three persons drowned when Frederic flooded St. Marten.

Most businesses closed in Philipsburg. the main town of St.

Maarten, the Dutch half of one of the leeward islands shared with France's St. Martin to the North. Included was the Mullet Bay Beach Hotel. St. Maarten's largest single employer, which shut down for a month to repair Frederic's damage.

Supporting Muzerowa at the conference is the white former premier, Ian Smith, the man who declared Rhodesia's unilateral independence in 1965 to avoid having to turn over power at Britain's behest to the blacks.

London editorial comment Monday morning was generally somber. The pro-Conservative Daily Telegraph took the view that "the omens and the precedents are discouraging."

The pro-Labor Daily Mirror said bluntly: "The chances of this conference succeeding are slight."

The independent Financial Times said: "there can be few grounds for optimism." The pro-Conservative Daily Express saw the conference as" Rhodesia's final chanceif agreement is not reached ... the matter will be settled by bullets.' Former Premier Smith, now a minister without portfolio and one of three whites in the 12-strong Muzorewa delegation, dismissed the doubters, telling reporters he thinks the conference has a good chance of success.

Smith, in Britain for the first time in 14 years, had been pledged immunity from pro-secution by the British authorities on treason charges arising from the unilateral declaration of independence.

He said: "We have come here in a very constructive frame of mind with one objective - to try to make the whole thing suc-

Referring to Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government, which succeeded the British Labor regime under whose auspices the abortive Geneva conference was held, Smith commented: "I believe we now have a govemment in this country which seems to be showing the kind of courage and integrity which one needs to arrive at an agreement."

Smith, 60-year-old son of a Scottish butcher, said he had long ago accepted black majority rule, but would be arguing in the conference for safeguards for the white minority.

By coincidence, Smith met and chatted at Heathrow Airport on his arrival with Sir Harold Wilson, former British Labor Prime Minister who had negotiated unsuccessfully with him about Rhodesia in previous years. Wilson, who was flying to the United States to undertake a lecture tour, was heard to wish Smith a successful conference.

Lord Carrington, British foreign secretary, presides over the conference at Lancaster House, a 150-year-old London mansion. The opening session will consist mainly of a speech by Carrington outlining British thinking._
The real business will begin Tuesday.

Besides trying to stop the war in Zimbabwe Rhodesia which has so far claimed up to an edimated 20,000 lives, the moves sought by Britain include new elections and a decisive limit on the powers the whites have at present to block constitutional change and control top military, civil service and judicial posts

Church links SALT to Cuba troops

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP) - The chairman of the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Sunday the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union stands no chance of being ratified by the Senate unless the Russians pull their combat troops out of Cuba.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who first revealed last week that U.S. intelligence had confirmed the brigade's presence, said "the mood of the senate" is such that SALT and

Amnesty seeking halt in police aid to dictatorships

BRUSSELS, Sept. 10 (R) - Amnesty International has decided to try to prevent the export of military and police equipment to countries where it might be used to violate human rights, General Secretary Martin Ennals said Monday.

Ennals told a press conference in Brussels that Amnesty's 12th International Council Meeting, which ended in Leuven Monday. had made the decison as part of an attempt to define more precisely the areas in which amnesty should take action.

"We have got to the point where we have to define very clearly what our mandate is."

Ennals said. He said the Amnesty council had decided to maintain its policy of "reporting information on human rights violations but of taking no stand on sanctions such as boycotts or cuts in aid against governments committing such violations."

the troops in Cuba are linked.

And he cautioned the Soviets to take the situation seriously when talks about the troops' status begin between the United States and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, who returned to Washington from Moscow Sunday afternoon.

Dobrynin, who had been on vacation in Russia, was to meet Monday with U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, said State Department spokesman David Nail. Meanwhile, a source who insisted on remaining anonymous confirmed that the Soviet troop presence in Cuba would be discussed at the meeting between Vance and Dobrynin. "What I'm interested now is that the negotiations begin on a serious note and not an attempt to dismiss it, as (the Soviet news agency) Tass has attempted to do... "I am for SALT," Church said. But, he added, "It is my assessment of the mood of the Senate that the SALT treaty will not get the necessary two-thirds majority unless these troops are removed." Church conceded that the soldiers themselves do not represent a strategic threat to the United States and may, in fact, have been there for several years. But he said the covert manner in which they were introduced to the island nation requires the United States to make a strong response. "If the American response is not sufficient to the provocation, then we're borrowing lots of trouble for the future," church said. "That will be a signal to Cuba ... it will be a signal to the world that we cannot afford to give at this
